THE BULLETIN:

BY EDWARD H. BRITTON.

EVENING NEWS.

FIRST EDITION.

Friday Afternoon, Jany. 23, '63.

[TELEGRAPHED FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Later from Wilmington.

WILMINGTON, N C., Jan. 22.

The vessel ashore at the mouth of New River turns out to be the schooner Dixie, from Nassau, with a cargo of salt. She was chased ashore by a Yankee steamer.

The crew will be saved but the vessel and cargo will, probably, be lost.

It has been ascertained that the Federal force near Jacksonville, N. C., consists of two and a half regiments of infantry, six hundred cavalry and six pieces of artillery, under command of Col. Emeny. They made no forward movement to-day.

An Official Dispatch.

FROM TULLAHOMA, TENN.

RICHMOND, Jan. 22.

The following dispatch has just been received and made public by the Adjutant General:

TULLAHOMA, Jan. 21.

To Gen. S. Cooper:

After the capture of the Transports and Gunboat, our Cavalry made a dash for a large Fleet of Transports just below Harpetch Shoals. They threw overboard their cargo of subsistence, ordnance and quartermasters stores, in immense quantities, and escaped by a hasty retreat.

Our troops, in the midst of snow and ice, crossed to the North side of the Cumberland by swimming their horses through an angry torrent much swollen by recent rains, routed the guard and captured and destroyed and immense collection of subsistence stores just loaded for transportation, by wagons, to Nashville.

(signed,) BRAXTON BRAGG.

North Carolina Legislature.

RALEIGH, Jan. 22.

SENATE.

In the Senate, to-day, a protracted debate sprung up upon the Ten Regiment Bill which was under consideration.

Several amendments were offered.

Messrs. Young, Copeland, Ellis and Murrill opposed the Bill, and Messrs. Lindsay, Taylor of C., and Smith of Macon, spoke in its favor.

Mr Young's speech was a lengthy and argumentative one.

The debate will be renewed to-morrow.

HOUSE.

In the House, the whole time was occupied in discussing the Revenue Bill.

The question pending on the adjournment of the Senate was an amendment introduced by Mr Lane to except from the provisions of the Ten Regiment Bill all in service or subject to conscription.

From the West.

MOBILE, Jan. 12.

The Advertiser & Register has the following:

"GRENADA, Jan. 19.—Five more prisoners captured off transports, opposite White river, arrived here to-night. They confirm the report of dissatisfaction prevailing among the Western troops, and say that the separation of Illinois and Indiana from the Union is freely conversed about and favored by the Western troops."

Northern News.

RICHMOND, Jan. 21.

The Indianapolis correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, says that Indiana is ripe for revolution. Within her borders a plot of the democratic leaders to seize the arsenal was defeated by the vigilance of Gov. Morton and a few others. The establishment of a Northwestern Confederacy was boldly advocated by democratic leaders in Indiana. Vallandigham in the House of Representatives on the 14th, advocated an armistic. The Herald's correspondent says his speech was listened to with the closest attention.

Napoleon did not allude to American affairs in his reply to the diplomatic corps during his new year's reception. When the Emperor passed where Dayton stood, he inquired, what news; and on Dayton's referring to bad news just received, his majesty replied, he regretted it, and hoped it would be better within a year.

From the United States.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT NEWS.

RICHMOND, Jan. 22.

The New York Herald says the leaders of the Indiana Democracy are in open rebellion against the Administration.

Bright and Hendricks says they have ninety-three thousand men ready to take the field against the Abolitionists and strike for their disenthralment from the East.

The assassination of Gov. Morton, who is the chief obstacle in the way of their designs is probable will soon take place.

The Rebel correspondence captured near Charleston embraces official dispatches to Mason and Slidell.

Prominent Republicans acknowledge that their party has lost power everywhere except in New England and predict the restoration of peace early in June.

The whole correspondence of Secretary Benjamin with Messrs. Mason and Slidell, captured from Saunders, appears in the National Intelligencer. Benjamin notices the secret courtesy exhibited towards Mr. Mason by Lord Russell which contrasts unfavorably with the conduct of M. Thouvenal and the French Government.

The Paris correspondent of the Herald says men of the highest official position boldly assert in conversation that France, single handed, has determined to put an end to the bloodshed in America if England continues to hold aloof.

In the Manufacturing districts in France 300,000 men are out of employment and in a starving condition.

Mr. Slidell has had another audience with Napoleon and communicated important dispatches from President Davis.

Served Him Right.

The Montgomery Advertiser tells of a couple of "city swells" driving out in a buggy in that place, when they met a young lady returning alone from a walk. One of the gay lotharios sprang from his seat and advanced to meet her, with rude intentions so unmistakably evident, both in language and gestures, that she found it necessary to "change his base," and did so by striking him to the earth, and while down slapped him on the face with her delicate little hand several times so severely and with so much energy as to cause a cry for quarter. The young heroine then merrily returned from the field of victory.

From Our Kinston Correspondent.

Jan. 20 1863.

EDITORS STATE JOURNAL:—The enemy who were in force at Kinston, on yesterday have disappeared entirely. Our scouts have just returned from below, and report no Yankees to be seen.

The opinion seems to prevail here that the Abolitionists have either returned to their wigwam at Newbern, or joined the expedition against Wilmington.

The movements of the enemy from Newbern against Wilmington seem to be placed beyond a doubt.

All is quiet along our lines to-day, below this town.—Raleigh State Journal.

Mr. Daniel Chandler, of Mobile, has suggested a plan for paying off our national debt without taxation. He is a financier of acknowledged ability, and was urgently recommended by the people of his section as a suitable person to fill the office of Secretary of the Treasury. He has written a good deal on the subject of the currency since the war commenced, and his views have attracted considerable attention. His plan for paying the national debt has recently, at the request of a Committee of leading men of Mississippi, been submitted to the public, and is briefly as follows:

1. That the Constitution be so amended as to make Confederate notes a legal tender, and that the national debt be funded.

2. That the Government shall become the purchaser of the entire Cotton crop—not for one year only, but for a series of years—paying the planter therefor a fixed uniform price.

3. That Government, being the absolute owner of the entire crop, and having undisputed control of the same, can dictate the price, and thus virtually make the world pay our debts.

4. That a heavy export duty be levied upon every bag shipped on private account, so as to give the Government the exclusive monopoly of the trade.

5. That Cotton, even at fifty cents per pound, is known to be the cheapest article for clothing purposes that has yet been discovered, and the present war has demonstrated that the world must and will have it, even at that price, though it might be policy to sell it for less.

6. That the Government shall guarantee to the planter twelve cents for his cotton, and then by selling it for even double that price (more can be had,) the excess would not only pay off the national debt in five years, but provide a fund out of which a navy may be built in the meantime and persons reimbursed for individual losses growing out of the war.

From Port Hudson.

PORT HUDSON, Jan. 12.—If there are any fears existing in regard to the safety of this point, let them be at once dismissed. All the Yankees in this world, and in that region where pine knots and cord wood would'nt bring the first cost of cutting, combined could not reduce Port Hudson.

A Veritable History.

We publish below a chapter of Chronicles, written by a Yankee after the defeat of McClellan at Richmond, and printed in a Yankee newspaper called the "Funny Fellow." The paper from which it is extracted was taken from the pocket of a dead Yankee in the streets of Fredericksburg.

And it came to pass in the days of the Great Rebellion:

Being in the year two of the Confederate States.

That the hordes of the North came rushing down upon the Capitol, even upon the royal city of Richmond;

Coming by way of the Chickahominy.

Led by a mighty man, even McClellan.

Who, it is said by some, and by others denied, was recommended that way by one Stanton and who advised a sea voyage that the health of his men might improve.

And whom it has also been whispered, in the dark aforetimes, leased of the Ruler of the South a certain swamp for a national cemetery.

And the men were landed on the Peninsula, even between the rivers,

And they went down towards the city;

Even toward the Capitol of the Confederate States.

And they came so near that they could hear the clocks strike.

Zew, it was even averred that watches could be heard to tick in the fobs of the F. F. V's.

And that babies could be heard crying in the nursery, refusing the maternal breast, but leaping with joy at the sight of a pistol.

Like unto one Beauregard, a valiant Captain.

Now it came to pass in the days when the warriors of the North came so near.

And had even filled several corner lots in the before mentioned cemetery.

That the anger and pity of the South were aroused.

But their wise men and great warriors said one unto the other.

This thing shall not be: Selah!

Our hearts ache for them: yet, lo! they are our enemies;

That though we welcome them to a resting place, we want not a Golgotha among us.

And our anger is stired by their coming so near.

Now it came to pass the warrior arose in the council and said:

Lo! I will go in behind them and see what there is to hinder their going back.

And this warrior's name was Stuart, even a horseman.

And he went.

Tnd he returned and reported that there was nothing in the way.

Then the chief ruler said:

Arise all ye valiant souls and drive them back.

And a righteous man, the follower of the great Jefferson—even one 'Stonewall' —also arose and went forth.

With many others.

And did the bidding of their rulers.

Then the chief of the Northern's said:

Lo! I have changed my base, and have done much harm to the enemy.

ORLANDO F. GLASSCOCK, "Grampion."

August 29, 1862.

Port Hudson is a small village on the east bank of the Mississippi, fifteen miles above Baton Rouge, about forty miles below the mouth of the Red River, and I suppose about two hundred and fifty below Vicksburg. It is free from inundation and is as strong as Fort Pillow.

PROSPECTUS OF THE CHARLESTON MERCURY

A POLITICAL, COMMERCIAL, AND LITERARY NEWSPAPER

PUBLISHED DAILY AND TRI-WEEKLY

THE MERCURY gives daily reports of the Market and Marine Intelligence in Charleston, and of Charleston commerce in the leading seaports of the world. The Weekly Prices Current is made up with much care, and from the most reliable sources. Its connection with the "Associated Press" insures the latest intelligence by Telegraph and the earliest news by Steamers from Europe. It has an able and accomplished Correspondent in London (a gentleman connected with the official staff of the London Times,) and regular Correspondents in New York, Washington, Key West and Havana. The monthly New York Fashion Letters and weekly letters on Life in Washington are additional attractions in favor of its lady readers. Its literary notices, from the pen of a gentleman who occupies perhaps the highest position among the literary men of the South, are discriminating and comprehensive.—Attention is paid to all matters of general concern, especially those in reference to the Planting and Agricultural interest, and to the current news of the day. Great care is taken that nothing shall appear in its columns which should be excluded from the family circle.

The political creed of the MERCURY consists in the principles of the Democratic Party, as laid down in the Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions of 1798 and 1799—the Sovereignty of the States; a strict construction of the Federal Constitution by the General Government, the agent of the States; Free Trade, and an economical Administration of the Government. Its policy is the Union of the Southern States in maintaining their rights.

The STATE JOURNAL will advocate Democratic principles in the broadest sense, and will support and defend Democratic measures and their advocates as they are presented, and as occasion may require. In other essentials it will be my aim to make the paper, what its name denotes, a State Journal—eschewing all sectional considerations and working for the entire State and her common interests.

As soon as arrangements can be made, the whole paper shall be re-modeled and printed with new type, on good paper, and in a superior manner.

The Editorial department will be properly attended to in its various branches, and will speak for itself. Neither labor nor expense will be spared in the management of the paper.

The terms of the State Journal will be as follows:

Each subsequent insertion....25 cents.

A liberal deduction on these rates for yearly advertisers in the Semi-Weekly. In the Weekly edition the full rates will be charged.

SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM GOV. Z. B. VANCE.

The following special message was read in the House of Commons at 12 o'clock, on the 21st inst.:

To the Honorable, the General Assembly, of North Carolina:

With the flight of time great events have occurred and are now crowding upon us. Since your adjournment in December, the invaders of our State have concentrated a large force upon our coast, and are again threatening our remaining seaports and lines of communication. Every preparation possible has been made to resist them, and it is hoped not without success. Still much remains to be done to strengthen our army and add to its efficiency. I beg leave respectfully to offer a few suggestions to you on this subject.

The most serious evils with which our generals have to contend are the inefficient execution of the conscript law and the alarming increase of desertion in the army. A long absence from home, and the severe hardships of our rapid and wonderful campaigns, naturally tends to produce these effects during a protracted war. To arrest these delinquents and return them to duty, the militia have heretofore been employed with some degree of success; but latterly they have been found inefficient owing to the many obstacles interposed by the law. Should an officer start out to arrest a deserter, the friends of the latter have only to give the alarm and he is spirited out of the way, or the officer is resisted by open violence. As desertion is not a crime known to the laws of this State, these persons who thus shield the deserter from arrest are liable to no punishment. The consequence is that numbers of deserters are concealed in many parts of the State, and banding together for companies and mutual protection, depredate upon the citizens near them, thus forming a kind of outlawed population in the midst of our quiet and orderly people.

This state of things, ruinous alike to the discipline of our army and the morals of our people, ought not to be suffered to continue and might be prevented in my opinion by a little prudent legislation. With the consent of the highest military authorities from whose commands they are absent, I propose to give absentees from the army without leave, by proclamation, thirty days in which they may return to duty free of punishment, and after that time to make them liable for the delay, to the severest penalties of the law. To enable the authorities to effect their arrest, I recommend, as I had the honor to do in my regular message to you that the militia laws be so amended as to subject both officers and privates of any particular company or regiment of the militia to the articles of war, when ordered to perform any duty of this kind at the discretion of the Executive; that power be given the Executive summarily to drop from the rolls officers guilty of gross and wilful neglect of duty, and that it be made a crime to shield or harbor deserters or to assist them to avoid capture. Should it be deemed best to continue to use the militia of the State for executing the Conscript law, these amendments will be indispensable, as Congress has failed in these respects to provide for the enforcement of its own acts.

I have been applied to in several instances as the appointing power of the regimental officers of our regiments raised originally for three years or the war, to promote men for gallant and meritorious conduct, but on close examination of the law I find I have no authority to deviate from the regular order of promotion by seniority in the appointment of company officers. This power ought to reside somewhere—the good of the service requires it. The humblest private in the ranks of the army ought to feel that there is the power and the will to lift him above the humble position to a commissioned officer, as a reward for gallantry and heroism. I therefore recommend that this authority be vested in the Executive to be exercised upon proper recommendations of commanding officers in the field.

The subject of arresting citizens on charges of disloyalty I beg leave again to allude to. Many have been recently taken up by the Confederate officers, and with a spirit of courtesy and respect for State authority, turned over to me for investigation. I am at a loss how to dispose of them. I cannot examine them myself, and of course regard it inconsistent with my duty to set them at liberty without an examination, and I am yet more unwilling to see them placed in the Confederate prison at Salisbury where the tracks of the accused all lead in one direction and the light of old English liberty is never seen. I therefore recommend the establishing of a commission for the investigation of charges against all such persons with power to commit for trial before the proper tribunal, if sufficient cause appears, &c.

In this connection I take great pleasure in transmitting a letter from Hon. James S. Seddon, Secretary of War, in relation to the case of R. J. Graves, and in response to the demand for his delivery to the authority of the State, made in obedience to a joint resolution of your two Houses. Admirable in spirit, ample in explanation of the circumstances under which the arrest was made, and in expressions of regard for the rights and sovereignty of the State, I am sure that, accompanying as it did the prompt surrender of the accused, it cannot fail to give you the satisfaction I experienced on its perusal.

In view of the threatened invasion of the State, I have been advised by the war department to call out the militia to assist in repelling it. Having consulted with the General in command of this department, I concluded to do so, but am at least doubtful of my authority to take the step, whilst your body is in session. Not wishing to exercise any doubtful authority when your presence and approbation may so easily make it certain, I most respectfully recommend that I be authorized immediately to call out such portion of the militia as may be deemed sufficient to meet the present emergency.

I have the honor herewith to transmit copies of resolutions on various subjects of the Legislatures of the States of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, forwarded to me by their respective Executives with a request that they be laid before you. The most important of these relates to the proposition of guaranteeing by each State of its proportion of the Confederate war debt, and to these I invite your early and deliberate attention.

I am also pleased to be able to inform you that the correspondence conducted by me with the War Department at your request, in relation to the burning of cotton in Eastern North Carolina, was entirely satisfactory, though for prudential reasons I thought it improper to make it public.

Very respectfully,
Z. B. VANCE.

To our Correspondents.

We have on hand a large number of Letters from some of our patrons ordering the direction of their paper changed but omitting to state from which office.

Of course we cannot spare the time to run through lists of some ten thousand names to find the name to make the change, hence the orders are not attended to, and the paper will be sent to the old office until a proper order is given.

☞ In your order to make a change please state the name of the office at which you have been receiving your paper as well as the office to which you desire it to be mailed in future, otherwise your order will not receive attention.

☞ The Chicago Times of the 7th contains a glowing account of the meeting at Springfield, Illinois, to protest against the conduct of Lincoln's Administration. The speakers were Richardson, Merrick, Marshall and Goudy. The Times says the people evidently coincided with the speakers, as such applause as greeted their bold and manly utterances never rang through the capitol.

An "Infernal Machine," the invention of a Finlander in the Russian service, is said to be the simplest and best invention of the kind yet devised. It consists of a glass reservoir, which, when filled with powder will float at a certain depth, and when brought into contact with a ship's bottom, will produce disastrous results.—Experiments have recently been made with this machine at the royal dock yard at Nyholm. The first experiment shattered the framework of a gunboat, and sent some of its planks to a height of eighty or one hundred feet. The second experiment threw up a column of water one hundred feet high, and the shock was felt a considerable distance.

Another "Unknown Hero" has been brought to light in a late issue of the Richmond Whig. It was Colonel Robert W. Folsom, of the 14th Georgia Regiment, who, at the battle of Cedar Run, rallied his men by waving the battle flag in the face of the foe, and who afterwards was borne through the victorious fight by two of his devoted soldiers. He was not wounded, but physically so exhausted that he was unable to stand. With such a leader, it is no wonder the 14th emulates the intrepid 12th Georgia.

The "Beast."

The following incidents should not be permitted to pass into oblivion, as the future historian of the present epoch might find it useful in illustrating already beyond precedent in modern times. It is furnished to the Selma Reporter by a refugee from New Orleans:

Escaping from New Orleans some few months since, I reached a plantation on the Mississippi, in the vicinity of Baton Rouge. Whilst receiving the hospitalities of my friend, the planter, the parish priest of Baton Rouge came in, who informed us that he was on his way from New Orleans to his home, and that he had visited the city for the purpose of procuring a permit from Butler to enable him to bring out food for the suffering poor of Baton Rouge, for the orphans under his charge, and for his own household.

He stated that Butler had peremptorily refused to permit any food to leave the city for the poor, saying that "they are our enemies, and my purpose is to exterminate them." The good priest then urged upon Butler the fact, that these poor people were necessarily, from their extremely destitute condition, precluded from taking any active part in our national troubles, and therefore, could not properly be called enemies. "Sir," said Butler in reply, "those that are not for us are against us, and if they were our friends, they would be in the Union army." "But General," continued the priest, "you should remember that a large portion of these poor people are women and children—poor innocent children." The monster to this appeal hissed between his teeth: "Does he who kills the serpent preserve the eggs? I tell you, sir, my purpose is extermination."

What was England's course towards Portugal? Did England await recognition by Spain? The revolt in Portugal began on the 1st December, 1640. In January, 1641, the Cortes legalized the authority of the Duke of Brganza, and within one year afterwards a treaty was signed at Windsor between Charles I and John IV, which not only recognized the independence of Portugal, but which treated the King of Castile as a dispossessed sovereign; and alleges, on the part of England, that he was moved to conclude this treaty, "by his solicitude to preserve the tranquility of his kingdom, and to secure the liberty of trade for his beloved subjects." The contest was carried on; the Spaniards obtained victories; they excited conspiracies, they created divisions. The palace of the King of Portugal was the scene of domestic discord, court intrigue and immediate usurpation. There is no trace of any complaint, or remonstrance of even murmur, against the early recognition by England, though it was not until twenty-six years afterwards that Spain herself acknowledged the independence of Portugal, and then in a treaty concluded under the mediation of England.

The Battle at Prairie Grove, Ark.

A correspondent of the Jackson Appeal gives an account of the fight on the 7th of December at Prairie Grove, near Fayetteville, Arkansas, between Gens. Hindman and Blount. The facts are these:

General Hindman marched, with about 9000 men, against the enemy—about 11,000—intending to cut off Herron's reinforcements of 7000. In this he failed; but, nothing daunted brought on the attack at daylight, capturing, in the first charge of Gen. Marmaduke's cavalry, a whole regiment and twenty-three wagons, heavily laden with quartermasters and medical stores. Soon after sunrise the fight commenced in good earnest, and with no cessation the artillery continued until nightfall. Our whole line of infantry, except 2000 who never engaged in the fight, were in close conflict nearly the whole day, the enemy attempting with their force of 18,000 men, to drive us from our position. In every instance they were repulsed, and finally driven back from the field. Night coming on, firing ceased, our men laying on their arms on the field. Our troops had not eaten or slept for forty-eight hours.

At twelve o'clock that night, Blount sent a flag begging for a cessation of hostilities for twelve hours, in order that he might bury his dead and care for his wounded, nearly all of whom were at that time still on the field. Detaining the officer until daylight, and during the time arranging to have a personal interview on the battle field with Blount, Gen. Hindman, knowing the almost starving condition of his men, ordered them to fall back during the night twenty miles, to where they could get food. Daylight brought on the interview between the opposing Generals, during which our cavalry were busy in gathering all the arms and spoils from the field, no Federal, except the wounded and dead being on it until 6 o'clock, the commencement of the twelve hours cessation of hostilities.

Our loss in killed on the field was eighty seven; wounded and in hospital, three hundred and eighty-six. The loss of the enemy, to my own personal knowledge, was about seven hundred killed. The number of wounded could not certainly have been less than from two thousand to twenty-three hundred.

Thus, with a force numbering but nine thousand badly fed, armed and clothed men, we made a forced march of fifty miles across Boston mountain, attacked and whipped a force of eighteen thousand of the best armed and equipped men I ever saw.

An eye witness of the fight gives the annexed description of a gallant bayonet charge made during the progress of the battle:

The brigade of Missourians under command of General Parsons occupied a position in a woods on the brow of a slight elevation, fronting which was a prairie field. Some half a dozen Federal regiments advanced in splendid order across the prairie. This was permitted by Gen. Parsons, who with difficulty restrained the ardor of his troops, until they had crossed a fence and advanced within sixty yards of our line, when the command was given—"Fire and charge bayonets." The order was obeyed literally. With a wild cheer following the report of their guns, the whole brigade rushed forward. The enemy were thrown into confusion by the destructive fire, declined a contest with cold steel, and turned and fled. They were overtaken at the fence, and the most terrible punishment inflicted upon them. About eighty were instantly killed by the bayonet alone, and a large number wounded. Several were found hanging over the fence, where they received their death wounds, and others with the detached bayonets yet pinning them to the earth. The route was complete, and the loss of life on this portion of the field greater than at any other point, but the result in our favor was decisive.

From Below.

A gentleman well informed, sends us the following facts from Kinston, dated the 17th:

KINSTON, N. C. Jan. 17, 1863.

The news from the front to-day is comparatively unimportant. The enemy about two hundred strong, yesterday made their appearance at Mill creek on the South side of Trenton river, and it is supposed intend building a bridge there. The force that appeared days ago at Core creek, was simply a reconnoitering party, thirty-five in number, and have fallen back. Deserters come in daily by twos and threes, and report the Yankee army as being almost demoralized by the proclamation and message of Lincoln.

Their officers are resigning every day in disgust. A very considerable number of the men are drafted and make their escape to our lines whenever they can. Six regiments mutinied last week, and two companies among those ordered out to fire on them, laid down their arms and joined the malcontents. It is supposed that the general dissatisfaction, coupled with the late storm, is the cause of their delay to advance both on this place and Wilmington.—Raleigh State Journal.

Pupils furnish their own candles, towels and toilet soap.

TERMS:—Seventy-five dollars required in advance; the balance at the end of the session. No deduction for absence unless in cases of serious illness.

The Town of Lincolnton has long been proverbial for its healthiness. It has daily Railroad communication with Charlotte, from which it is only two hours distant. For the benefit of pupils from sickly sections, our long vacation is in the winter.

Besides the necessary public rooms, the building furnishes accommodations for about sixty boarding pupils.

We pay very especial attention to the elementary branches of education. Every pupil of the School, however far advanced, is required to take Arithmetic, Spelling, Grammar, and Composition, as regular studies.

The fact that we have semi-annual classes enables us to enforce a higher standard of scholarship than is usual in the best institutions conducted on the ordinary annual plan.

We send home at the middle and the end of each session a deportment, scholarship, and punctuality of each pupil.

The School is a private enterprise, being in no wise under the patronage or influence of any sect or denomination. Each pupil is allowed to attend Sunday School in her own church.

For further information, address the Principal. Jan 10, 1863—6w*
